History and Geography for our Interconnected World

This university-level history course utilizes the SDGs to connect world history to our world today. Students adopt a country and select an SDG for that country. Throughout the course, they revisit their country and SDG reflecting on its history, then present their findings in a cumulative project.

HISTORY AND GEOGRAPHY FOR OUR INTERCONNECTED WORLD

ABOUT THE COURSE

This introductory-level university course introduces students to modern world history and geography. It provides an opportunity for students to learn and further develop foundational research and writing skills by incorporating practice into every class session. Early in the course, students select a country to study, then all research and writing activities are focused on that country. It utilizes the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals to help students explore their country and make connections to our modern world. The course utilizes openly licensed textbooks and publicly available materials as course materials. This survey course is intended for freshmen and sophomore-level students who are interested in exploring historical, political and social contexts beyond their own. Students will have ample opportunities to practice foundational skills including writing, research, source citation, critical thinking and public speaking. It was originally taught over 13 weeks as part of a Fulbright US Scholar grant in the International College at Tunghai University in Taichung Taiwan. The full course can be found on OER Commons. ## Instructor Resources

Thank you for adopting this course! I hope that these materials help in your teaching.

I always welcome feedback on the course and associated materials. Please leave comments in OER Commons or email me at bbuljung@mines.edu.

This section contains additional resources that will be helpful for instructors adopting all or part of this course.

Course Learning Outcomes:

Upon completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Describe aspects of human and physical geography that might impact a country's development
2. Identify countries, cities, physical features and political boundaries by reading and analyzing maps
3. Connect historical events and eras to the modern development of a country
4. Compile an analysis of the historical and geographic features of a country utilizing college-level writing skills
5. Apply practical research skills to historical, geographic, political and sustainable development research topics.

Additional Materials

Attached to this module you'll find:

1. Course Grid - this spreadsheet shows the breakdown of topics, readings and assignments throughout the course. It was designed for a 13 week term, but can be adapted a different length term.
2. Student assignment samples - samples of successful student work for each of the three primary assignments. Each student sample contains its own attribution.
