The Real life "Soryavanshi"

"IPS Officer Vishwas Nangare Patil."

Akshay Kumar has lately been celebrating the success of his film "Soryavanshi", which has creating a huge impact on the box office.

According to a recent statement by the actor Akshay Kumar took inspiration from a real-life police officer who has worked in Mumbai Police for years now. He openly admitted that Vishwas Nangare Patil was the role model for his character in the movie.

Vishwas Nangare Patil was the Deputy Commissioner of Police zone-1 in South Mumbai during the Mumbai terror attack of 2008. He led the team at the Taj Hotel, Salaba, on November 26, and shot one of the terrorists. Here's his inspiring story of real life 'Soryavanshi' that makes all of us proud.

Vishwas Nangare Patil is one of the best IPS officers India has ever got. Moreover, through his determination and jolly personality, Vishwas Patil inspired the youth in spreading awareness regarding women's safety, traffic norms, and rural development. Belonging to a small rural town of Kerkand in Shirala tehsil of Sangali district in western Maharashtra. Vishwas completed his schooling at New English School, Shirala.

A Journey from a small village to millions of hearts IPS Vishwas Nangare Patil belongs to the 1997 batch of IPS cadre.

At the age of 25 years, this spirited soul cracked the UPSC exams. Vishwas Nangare Patil, an IPS officer of the 1997 cadre and he serves as the Joint Commissioner of Police in Mumbai City. Formerly he was Commissioner of Police, the Nashik city. Patil exemplifies the face of a quintessential, competent police officer who has not only endeared himself to the rank and file of his department but has also earned a reputation as an officer with a humane and sensitive mind.

IPS officer Vishwas Nangare Patil carries with him an impeccable record that comes from a long saga of an undaunted struggle. Starting as an aspirant UPSC candidate in pursuit of a career in the police force to an officer having won the coveted President's Police Medal for gallantry for his fearless role in the counter-terrorist operations during the 2008 Mumbai attacks.

Vishwas Nangare Patil is a ray of hope and a role model for youngsters who want to carve out a name in the rough and tumble of life. Vishwas Nangare Patil's recipe for success has made him a youth icon. The conscientious and guilelessness which he narrates in his book based on his life story "Mann Mein Hai Vishwas" - in this book he reveals that one doesn't need urban polish to make people become big. The experiences he relates are not merely motivational quotes but a practical guide to all those who nurse similar dream.

I HAVE A DREAM

Five score years ago, a great American, in whose symbolic shadow we stand signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This momentous decree came as a great beacon light of hope to millions of Negro slaves, who had been seared in the flames of withering injustice. It came as a joyous daybreak to end the long night of captivity. But one hundred years later, we must face the tragic fact that the Negro is still not free. One hundred years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination. One hundred years later, the Negro lives on a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity.

One hundred years later, the Negro is ~~full~~ still languishing in the corners of American Society and finds himself an exile in his own land.

So we have come here today to dramatize an appalling condition. In a sense we have come to our nation's capital to cash a check when the architects of our republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note to which every American was to fall heir. This note was a promise that all men would be guaranteed the inalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this sacred obligation. America has given the Negro people a bad check which has come back marked "Insufficient funds" but we refuse to believe that the bank of Justice is bankrupt.

We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation so we have come to cash this check --- a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice. We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquilizing drug of gradualism.

ROONEY SCORES AGAIN

England's football team wins again. This is great result says Rooney.

It was all down to the penalty shoot out. England didn't score during extra time.

They'd score twice in the first ten minutes of the match.

Rooney scored both goals. Rooney's goals were stunning and on target.

He's one of the best players that we have said the manager.

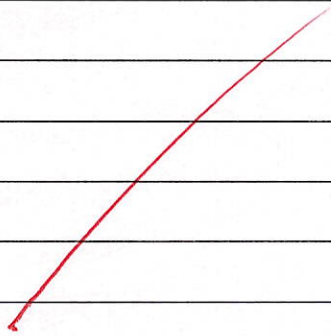

He hit the spot in Munich and we have to go him to thank for this win too.

But all wasn't I well for England. The defenders had to work hard.

They now need to get ready for the next match, they can relax yet.

With the next match in two week a time player's need to keep focused.

Let's hope that this is the start of something good for the England team.

"THE PERFECT EXCUSE"

Bright, bloody liquid trickled from her hand down her forearm in a steady stream. It was cooler than she had expected. And thinner. Not that she'd really given it much thought. This was more impulsive, a spur of the moment action. Somewhere in the depths of her despair, she had come across the wild conclusion that it might satisfy her rage soothe her. It hadn't. Of course, that was to be expected.

The knife she'd been using mere moments earlier was laying on the terracotta tiles, just over to her somewhere off in the left. She only noticed it there now because somewhere off in the distance, a cloud had shifted, drifted, blown away by the autumn breeze, unveiling a ray of sun that perfectly - almost so perfectly you'd think it was planned - illuminated the sharp crimson - streaked blade through the window above the sick. A few red splashes attempted to blend in with the clay-colored floor.

She Couldn't take her eyes off of him.

He was perfectly still, staring back at her with a look of what? Confusion? Annoyance? Loathing? Whatever it was, it seemed permanent.

She plunged the knife into his chest, then his gut, and finally, for good measure, once more into the general area where she assumed his ticket must be. If he still had one. She wouldn't be surprised if when the autopsy came back they found nothing but droplets of melted ice. Son of a bitch.

His body fell into a heap at her feet. His eyes bugged out, large and afraid. Incredulous. By George! (And by, George.) He hadn't thought she would actually do it.

Blood pooled around him but she wasn't concerned - she'd been meaning to have the kitchen redone one of these days anyway. Better sooner than later.

Twisting on the hot water tap, she casually rinsed the lustrous blade, a mix of warm blood and tomato juice spiralling down the drain.

The knife needed to be spotless. She would deal with her dead husband later.

She had spaghetti to make.

STORY WRITING

UNITY IS STRENGTH.

An old man lived with his four sons in a village. The old man was worried. His sons were always quarrelling with each other. They would never agree on any point. The old man had tried telling them many times to avoid fighting. But his sons would not listen to him. They would fight for everything.

One day, he called his four sons. He gave them to break the bundle into two. "It's so easy", said the eldest son. He took the bundle and tried to break it. He was surprised that the sticks in the bundle remained unbroken. He used more force. He tried again and again. But the bundle of sticks did not break. He gave up. Then his brothers tried to break the bundle of sticks. They tried hard but they too could not succeed.

Their father smiled and asked them to ~~write~~ untie the bundle. Now the sticks were separated. He gave each brother a single stick and asked them to break it. Each of the sons took a stick in hand. In no time, the sticks were bent and broken.

"A single stick is easily broken. If four sticks come together, it is impossible to break them. If you are united, help each other and live in friendship, you will be stronger than any enemy. But if you are divided among yourselves and keep fighting, you will be as weak as the single stick in that bundle."

Remember, united we stand, divided we fall". said the old man, giving his sons a meaningful look.

This time the brothers learnt a lesson. They stopped fighting with each other. They started to work in a team and that really helped them.

Moral of the story:- UNITY IS STRENGTH

THE SHADOW MAN

So, there was a man who used to follow me. Tall and thick wearing dark long coats, boots, black hat and he is always shrouded in darkness. He is me, yes me! My shadow, The shadow man and I named him depression. So, whenever the shadow man made an appearance, I felt empty and life seemed to slow down. He would surprise me with a visit for no reason or occasion. The shadow man made me look and feel older than my years.

When the rest of the world seemed to be enjoying life, I could only see it through the shadow man. Activities that usually brought me pleasure suddenly ceased to. He like to ruin my appetite. He chewed up my memory and ability to concentrate. Doing anything or going anywhere with the shadow man required super human strength. At social situations, he would sniff out what confidence I had and chase it away.

My biggest fear was being found out. I worried that people would judge me. Because of the shame and stigma of the shadow man, I was constantly worried that I would be found out. So, I invested vast amount of energy into covering him up. Keeping up an emotional life is exhausting. Shadow man could make me think and say negative things. He could make me irritable and difficult to be around. He would take my love and bury my intimacy. He loved nothing more than to wake me up with highly repetitive and negative thinking. He also liked to remind me how exhausted I was going to be next day.

As I got older the Shadow man got bigger and he started hanging around all the time. So, going down became easier than getting up again. So, I rather became good at self medication which never really helped. Eventually, I felt totally isolated from everything and everyone. The Shadow man had finally succeeded in hijacking my life.

When you lose all joy in life you can begin to question what the point of it is. Thankfully, this was the time that I sought professional help. This was my first step towards recovery and a major turning point of my life. I learnt that it doesn't matter who you are. The Shadow affects millions and millions of people. I learnt that medication help some and others might need a different approach altogether. I learnt that being emotionally genuine and authentic to those who are close to you can be an absolute game changer. Most importantly I learnt not to be afraid of shadow man and I taught him a few tricks of my own. It's also important to learn how to quiet your own mind. It's been clinically proven that regular exercise can be effective for treating mild to moderate depression as antidepressants. So, I go for a walk with my cute little dog. The most important thing to remember is that no matter how bad it gets, if you take right steps, talk to right people, shadow man days can and will pass.

So, I wouldn't say that I am grateful for shadow man but he has been an incredible teacher. He forced me to reevaluate and simplify my life. I learnt that rather than running away from my problem, it is better to embrace them. The pain you feel today is the strength you feel tomorrow. Remember, A Smooth Sea never made a Skill warrior.
